

To Exhibitors and Trainers:

Your decision to voluntarily participate in the Daffodil Summer Show, hosted by the Daffodil Arabian Horse Club is one you must take seriously. Our nation and planet are experiencing a health crisis not seen in over a century. The direct toll on humanity from loss of life due to COVID-19, and indirectly due to economic and other factors will be felt for years to come.

The Daffodil Arabian Horse Club, along with AHA, recognize the seriousness of the coronavirus pandemic. Successful implementation and conduct of this horse show hinge on you making a personal commitment to follow published guidelines from the CDC, other health and government agencies, and this horse show. You must abide by the guidelines to mitigate risk to yourself and other participants. To mitigate risk for yourself and others, you must keep your “social footprint” as small as possible, practice social distancing, and rigorously follow the Best Practices specified within this document and stated at the show. Wash your hands throughout the day and use hand sanitizer. Be honest with how you’re feeling and immediately self-isolate and call medical personnel if you experience coronavirus-related symptoms. Finally, keep an eye on others, and help enforce our guidelines among your peer groups. If you see something that’s not right, say something. We believe that it is important for our horse show, and all horse shows to take any steps that are prudent, responsible, and safe to get our industry working again.

We will follow the guidelines and best practices outlined from AHA and USEF.
